A joint resolution introduced the house last Thursday by J. Duckworth of Anderson, proposed t place a constitutional amendment be fore a referendum of the people in the general election to be held nex the general election to be held hext November increasing the term of of-fice of governor and elective state of-fleers from two to four years. The amendment also would make the gov-ernor incligible to succeed himself.

- The first selective draft in South Carolina cost the government $61,-968,76, according to announcement of the provost marshal-general. Of this the provost marshal-general, Or this amount $28,221 was paid to members of exemption boards, $26,762.30 was paid employes of the boards, $389,30 was expended for physical examinations, $1,983.37 for travel, $831.58 for part of the paid of the pai rent and $4,060.91 for supplies.

R. C. Boswell, a grocer of Columbia, was convicted before Judge Memminger last Saturday of storing liquor. Constables had located about liquor. Constables had located about forty gallons of liquor in Roswell's home between the ceiling and flooring. The judge sentenced Roswell to $500 fine and one year, but agreed to suspend the sentence on condition that the convicted man leave the state never to return. Boswell was allowed thirty days in which to decide what he would do.

cide what he would do.

The state revenue for 1918 from taxes is estimated by Charles W. Sawyer, comptroller general, in his annual report at $2,716,922,76 based on the present rate of 8 1-2 mills on the present assessment of $319,637,-972. With estimated income from sources other than taxes of $351,950, the total estimated revenue is $3,067,972,76. Of taxes amounting to $2,716,922,76 levied in 1917, only $566,615,63 was paid by the last of the year, the comptroller-general says.

ing feature of the legislative session the coming week will be the investig-tion by the senate committee of the charges, preferred in a veto messa, charges, preferred in a veto messa by Governor Manning sent to the se by Governor Manning sent to the sen ate on the last day of the last session against the administration of Col. A. Richardson as chief game warder. The entire matter is familiar to the people of the state. Colonel Richardson was a Blease appointee as chie game warden. He held a four-yeaterm which expired in March, 1917 Governor Manning assumed the dutie of the governor's office in January 1915. Immediately he instituted is of the governors office in Januar 1915. Immediately he instituted programme, which he carried out, getting rid of all officeholders wi were not his partisans. He had r power to remove the chief game ware an, and Col. Richardson held on, ar an, and to held up his department in 1916 the legislature passed an a making the office of chief game ware en elective by the legislature. In lit with his partisan attitude, Govern with his partisan attitude. Govern Manning vetoed this act, and the le-islature of 1917 sustained his vet which still left the appointment Colonel Richardson's successor in the hands of the governor, to be mad upon the recommendation of the Au dubon society. The legislature of 191 thereupon passed an act continuing th game warden in office until the en suing general election, and making th suing general election, and making the office elective by the people, as other officers are chosen. Governor Manning on the last day of the session vertoed this act, and in his veto mes sage preferred certain charges agains Colonel Richardson, in regard to whice Richardson demanded an investigation. In the meantime, the governowas limited in his power of appoint ment by the recommendation of the Audubon society. The society continued to recommend Colonel Richardson whereupon a rump convention claiming to be the society was held and Ming to the society was held to the socie ing to be the society was held and M W. W. Gibbons nominated. The go ernor appointed Mr. Gibbons, and the attorney general instituted an action which is still pending in the courts. attorney general instituted an action, which is still pending in the courts, to test Mr. Gibbes's title to the office. Colonel Richardson does not now claim the office, under the decision of the supreme court, but he did demand that the senate investigate the charges preferred against him by Governor Manning, and the senate granted his request for an investigation, and postponed action upon the governor's veto, pending the investigation, until Friday. January 18. Senator Alan Johnston of Newberry, a close friend of the administration, led a losing fight in the senate against postponing consideration of the veto message until the charges could be investigated, the senate holding, by a vote of 28 to 9 that Richardson was entitled to submit his side of the case. The position of Colonel Richardson was clearly set forth in a letter to the senate, transmitted through Senator John F. Williams of Aiken, in which he asked that "an immediate investigation be made, and if Gov. Manning's charges are true, then throwy me out, or do as you like Mark Robinson is senated. "an immediate investigation be made, and if Gov. Manning's charges are true, then throw me out, or do as you will with me: I stand ready to pay the penalty. On the other hand, if the governor's charges are untrue, and I say they are, then with the consent of you gentlemen I am a contender for the office of chief game warden, either before the people or before the general assembly." The committee which has been appointed to conduct the investigation, and which will probably

"The stories we hear in this country of drunkenness in the American forces over there are not true," said Mr. Kenyon. "I am considered a prohibition crank, but I say to my temperance friends they should not credit the drinking tales that have come to this country. Now and then one sees a drunken soldier as we used to see a drunken congressman, but that is all. "Gen. Pershing is a temperance man, and he knows far better how to handle the situation than people insoft chairs over here. If that be treason to my prohibition friends, let them make the most of it."
